For many years, the Judo Grand Slam in Moscow has become a reference in the judo world. And once again, the best judoka on the planet will meet in the Russian capital to win the title.

A few weeks prior to the 2012 London Olympics, the tournament will have a perfume of very high performance. For many athletes, the Moscow Grand Slam represents an important step in their preparation for the Games and there is no doubt about the level of competition that we will see in May.

I wish to all the delegations that will be present, the best possible results. I wish them to push as high as possible the colors of their country, while respecting the rules of our sport and respecting their opponents, the referees, the officials, the spectators and the media.

We are approaching the end of a lengthy Olympic cycle that has marked all minds. The Moscow Grand Slam is as such a major event in our world circuit.

Mr. Vasily Anisimov
President of the Russian Judo
Federation

Dear Friends!

On behalf of the Russian Judo Federation, I am pleased to welcome guests, participants, and spectators to the Grand Slam tournament in Moscow.

This event is very special for us. It coincides with a big anniversary for Russian judo – the 40th anniversary of the foundation of the Russian Judo Federation. This tournament has great historical significance for all fans of The Gentle Way in our country. For two decades, the Moscow tournament has been the hallmark of Russian Judo. I am certain that this time we will as ever organize it at the very highest level.

The Moscow Grand Slam is one of the last events in the pre-Olympic season. Two months ahead of the Olympic Games-2012, you will get a chance to see the strongest athletes on the planet – medal hopefuls for the London Summer Olympics - on the mats in the Russian capital.

We look forward to a remarkable sporting event, combining the highest technical ability of true masters with the emotions of such a prestigious event.
